Pumelo-strawberry juice?

No, really. Outstanding.

I think it needs rum.

Rum? Or vodka?

Damn, that would make a good slushy drink.

How do you get the strawberries to the juicer? Mine would be re-routed to my mouth.

My first thought, too.

Strawberries do not last in this house. They almost don't make it through the front door.

One for the juicer, one for me.

Want some? I have another pumelo. Bring the rum. We can pretend we're on a beach in Maui.

Is it sunset on Maui yet? Because that's a very sunset-worthy drink.

Two hours to sunset. Did you get the item?

Can you guarantee my safety?

Just so you know, it's 83 degrees here.

U! R! MEAN! Here it's...oh, hell, you know what it is here.

Don't suppose you want to make me one of those pumelo-strawberry daquiris?

standuponit

November 26 2008, 03:12:02 UTC COLLAPSE

Shall we drink it for you?

Or just stick it in the freezer for when I get back.

When you get back, I'll make you a nice fresh one to celebrate. Several nice fresh ones.

But you've reminded me. Fruit sorbets. Yes.

You know what sucks about long plane flights?

Lots of time to think.

I should have stayed in DC.

...yeah. Shit, yeah.

Have T'giving with your folks, change your ticket and come back Friday. We'll have leftovers for you.

That just moves the other half of the plane flight closer. Besides, they never get to see me. They claim they like me.

Well, I have to drive to Maryland tomorrow anyway. I'll call you from the car and wake you up. We'll hang out.

Even rum.

 eljefe

November 26 2008, 04:24:48 UTC COLLAPSE

And now we know why the rum is always gone.

Hey, you! Thought about you a lot yesterday and Wed. while I was, um, COOKING. All manner of things. With baking, and basting, and chopping, and flavors, and risk-taking, and potential failure modes.

So, I thought I would just let you know: I am thankful for you and your cooking posts, which have really made me feel like I could do this thing I always wanted to do but never did (um, cook), and look! I made a Thanksgiving dinner to feed fifteen when only five were coming over, just so everyone could have their favorites. And I did use some small cheats, but not many.

And no one keeled over, and everyone ate until they couldn't move, and everything was nommy.
